Governor Cooper,

Today I learned that the Mountain Valley Pipeline is closer to being fully approved. As Duke and Dominion spend millions of dollars to greenwash the public about the ACP, more research comes out letting us all know that we are out of time. It is worse than we all thought. As bad as it could be.

I mean, it is likely already too late to do anything about out of control global warming. You must know this. I hope you know this. I hope you will do all you can to STOP the ACP from being approved. To stop any additional gas plants from being built. To move our state to 100% renewable energy. You are in a position to actually do something. You. Not me, not my husband or our son or our neighbors. Besides write you and Tillis and Burr and everyone until we're blue in the face. Which we've all done. Those of us that know the truth of the situation. Though we are trying with all we can to influence you, and all our representatives, and find ways to do this ourselves. In this crazy country turned on it's head.

People tell me that "Well, if it is that bad then I trust our politicians will do something about it." It is that bad, and yet they're not doing anything about it.

Please, tell the people "It is that bad!" and do something about it. First and foremost, tell the people it is that bad. Tell them. Everyone needs to know. Now. Today. Call a press conference. Bring the scientists by your side. And tell them. On prime time TV. Please. Save my son. My neighbor's children. Your children. Our grandchildren. Tell the people the truth. Let's fix this. Let's begin.

Thank you,
Amanda Robertson
